

11th Annual Conference on PCIT for Traumatized Children

❖ The goals of [cultural] competencies are to address...cultural self awareness, awareness of the worldview of the client, and developing culturally appropriate intervention strategies

Janine Jones, University of Washington, 2007

Socratic Roundtable Discussion

- It is the clinician's complete responsibility to motivate parents to keep them from dropping out of treatment.
- A clinician cannot control or guarantee a family will not drop out of treatment.
- Men cannot coach adequately because they do not have the emotional sensibilities necessary for success.
- A clinician's memories, and stories rooted in their past have no influence over the therapeutic relationship.
- Matching race and ethnicity of coaches and clients are the only characteristics for determining success or failure in PCIT
